

BAT

Bats are avian omnivorous and carnivorous mammals that feed upon insects, encompassing red bats, brown bats, black bats, hoary bats, fruit bats, hog-nose bats, horseshoe bats, vampire bats and similar creatures. Although their eyes are functional, they use sound—echo-location—to hunt down prey. And they are famous for sleeping upside down while clinging to cave ceilings.

- Squeaky bats include oversized, larger-fanged versions of regular bats such as red bats, brown bats, black bats, hoary bats, fruit bats, hog-nose bats and horseshoe bats.
- Flappy bats are gigantic cousins of regular bats, especially vampire bats, with an aggressive nature and very tough, leathery hides.
- Nightcloak bats are variants with thicker hides, longer fangs, and magical powers that allow them to create darkness so they can blind prey while taking advantage of their own echo-location.
