

FISH

Fishes are aquatic omnivorous or carnivorous animals, encompassing a huge variety of fishes and sharks, as well as eels, rays and lampreys; they are the ultimate scavengers and feed on anything remotely edible. But when caught on land, they are nearly helpless and have to flop vigorously to attempt to make it back to water. Yet their scales are slippery in the extreme, so they are notoriously hard to grasp.

Fishes primarily attack with their bites, though occasionally they may be strong enough to slap or slash prey with their tails.

- Small yet ferocious, darting fishes are quick to attack meaty targets and include piranhas and fighting fishes.
- Gliding through the water like snakes, wriggling fishes include eels and lampreys.
- Lazily flapping through their environs, skating fishes include rays and skates.
- Swiftly swimming with bladed snouts, racing fishes include swordfishes and marlins.
- Craftily moving slowly yet ready to accelerate, lurking fishes include sharks.
- Frenzy fishes are variants with hardened scales, larger mouths and extra-sharp teeth that allow them to rip prey apart in savage, mindless frenzies where they ignore all pain, even as they are being killed.
